

Megachurch Pastor's Viral Spirit-Inspired Speech Just 'Set Back the Devil's Agenda'

His message isn't sugar-coated, that's for sure, but some say it's anointed.

House Modesto Pastor Glen Berteau was performing a baby dedication when he says he felt convicted to speak out against the Charlottesville rallies.

"Saying you're going to use the Word of God to hate somebody of a different color, you've got to be the dumbest person that's on this earth to go ahead and say something like that. There's a bunch of stupid white people, I'm just telling you," Berteau says in a video that's now gone viral, with 4.2 million views at the time of this writing.

And viewers loved what he had to say.

"Amen . Truly your preaching is anointed. The boldness of how you deliver it and much encouraging. I like your humbleness showing people around. Truly the Holy Spirit is in you touching peoples lives. God bless you more Ptr. Glen and more of anointing and blessings of God to you. Pls. Pray for my right foot. Till now for almost 2 weeks Im suffering pain that hard for me to walk. God's time healing will come and through your anointing prayer. Thank you Lord God , thank you too Ptr. Glen," one person commented on the video.

Another writes: "Pastor you just set the devils agenda back in a might way. I know that may not have been one of your sermon points, but you preached heaven just now because you preached love. I don't know you, but from Virginia know that you have some brothers and sisters in the Lord that love you for being authentic and real and calling the devil out and naming his deceitful ways. GOD bless you pastor and may GOD blessed your ministry 20 fold."
