

Melania Trump Announces AI Revolution for America's Kids

First Lady Melania Trump announced a nationwide AI challenge for K-12 students, inviting them to participate in an event to “discover, develop, and expand AI’s potential.”

“As someone who created an AI-powered audiobook and championed online safety through the ‘Take It Down Act,’ I’ve seen firsthand the promise of this powerful technology,” Trump said in a video statement. “Now, I pass the torch of innovation to you.”

“Just as America once led the world into the skies, we are poised to lead again, this time in the age of AI,” she continued.

The Presidential AI Challenge, open to kindergartners through 12th graders, is intended to “unleash their imagination and showcase the spirit of American innovation,” the first lady said.

According to the initiative’s website, the Presidential AI Challenge celebrates 250 years of independence.

“Early training in the responsible use of AI tools will demystify this technology and prepare America’s students to be confident participants in the AI-assisted workforce, propelling our Nation to new heights of scientific innovation and economic achievement,” the site explains, directing participants in the challenge to “complete a project that involves the study, development, or use of an AI method or tool to address community challenges, while educators will focus on creative approaches to teaching or using AI technologies in K-12 learning.”
