

Michael Brown: We Need a God-Fearing President in the White House

Prior to the start of a campaign rally for presidential candidate U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz (R-Texas) in Charlotte, North Carolina, on Monday, Dr. Michael Brown helped fire up the crowd.

The Messianic Jewish talk radio host first called for a “God-fearing president in the White House” before calling for a new American revolution. Not a revolution of “hatred and anger and violence,” he said, but rather a “gospel-based” moral and cultural revolution.

“Just think for a minute,” he said. “In the course of one generation, we’ve gone from watching Leave It to Beaver to watching sex-filled violent shows like Game of Thrones. We’ve gone from watching Lassie as a family to being entertained by The Sopranos. We’ve gone from Father Knows Best to Keeping Up With the Kardashians, and let me point something out. Robert Young, the patriarch in ‘Father Knows Best,’ was never named Woman of the Year. Our society is turned upside down.”
