

Model Fights Against Cosmo Magazine

Model and actress Nicole Weider is leading a campaign demanding that the magazine Cosmopolitan be sold in a non-transparent wrapper to adults only, to prevent children from buying and reading material inappropriate for their development. The model initially created a YouTube video displaying her discontent with the magazine and posted it to her fast-growing website geared toward Christian teenage girls, .

But Weider (pictured) received so many responses from girls who had been negatively affected by Cosmopolitan that she decided to create the petition. At press time, the petition included almost 24,000 signatures. “We are not asking Cosmopolitan to change their content,” explains Weider. “We simply want them to take responsibility for it.” —Gina Meeks
