Satanic Claims Arise Over King Charles' Portrait

Viral ORU Commencement Video Captivates 8 Million Viewers

A recent Instagram reel from Oral Roberts University featuring its 2024 Commencement ceremony has garnered over 8 million views in less than a week.

The video, which showcases the graduating class united in singing "Goodness of God" by CeCe Winans, presents a striking contrast to the turmoil, protests and canceled graduations occurring at numerous colleges across the United States. This moment serves as a poignant reminder that unity is still present in some corners of America.

"This video and the global response to it are testaments to the Spirit-empowered culture at our University," said ORU

President Dr. William M. Wilson. "Our graduates receive an education that is both academically excellent and spiritually enriching. The fact that our Commencement worship resonated with millions shows that faith is important to the world. People want to experience God's love, and they are seeking peace in the midst of drama and trauma. To God be the glory!"

WATCH: Satan on Display During Global Music Competition

There's no question if we're living in dark times.

Recently, the demonic realm was praised during a global music competition. The Eurovision Song Contest 2024 featured artists from all over Europe. However, the performance from Ireland was far from family friendly.

The performer representing Ireland, Bambie Thug, stood in a ring with the outline of a pentagram and candles surrounding her. Her dark costume combined with horns and pale makeup presented a death-like appearance. Later, she was joined on stage by a man, who was painted in gray-blue. The two danced provocatively together. By the end of the song, Bambie Thug has her dark clothes removed to reveal a two-piece transgender flag-themed outfit.
