

Morris Cerullo: God Is Raising Up Spiritual Terrorists

Morris Cerullo has been calling people to prayer for decades. Now, he's using the print media to inspire the masses to intercession.

Cerullo, whom God has used to pioneer overseas ministries and open many countries that have been considered closed to the gospel, kicked off his 44th annual World Conference in Nashville Tuesday. The first issue of A Call to Global Prayer debuted in December.

"The world is sitting on a powder keg—ready to explode," Morris Cerullo says in a statement on the MCWE website. "In this Global Call to Prayer magazine, I open my heart—and take you to a new level of strategic, spiritual warfare prayer."

As Cerullo sees it, if ever there was a time for Christians to pray, it's now. He believes in the power in prayer and hears God sounding an alarm in this hour.

"The church must understand as never before, that in our arsenal we possess a secret weapon (prayer)," Cerullo says. "We need—and must have—divinely energized prayer."

Cerullo is convinced that God is raising up spiritual terrorists armed with weapons that are 100 percent effective, 100 percent of the time, over 100 percent of the enemy's power. He says, "Through prayer you can prevail with God for the nations of the world!"
