

New Jesus Hoax Can't Rewrite What the Bible Already Settled

They're at it again.

In a stunning—and sadly not surprising—attempt to stir headlines and challenge the core of Christian faith, the Daily Star is promoting a story claiming that the body of Jesus Christ has been located, supposedly buried alongside the Ark of the Covenant beneath the Great Pyramid of Giza.

According to the article, British anthropologist Dr. Warner claims to have found both the sarcophagus of Jesus Christ and the Ark of the Covenant “stored for centuries in a hidden double-cave, beyond a stone block which seals the southern passageway of the subterranean chamber beneath the Great Pyramid in Giza.”

He goes even further, proposing that Mount Sinai, the Mount of Olives, Mount Zion and even the Quran's Mountain of Light all are beneath the Great Pyramid itself.

Yes, you read that right—he suggests Jesus gave His Sermon on the Mount at the Great Pyramid.

This isn't science. This is a direct contradiction of the Bible and the life, death and Resurrection of Jesus Christ.

The article notes: “Dr Warner, who confirms that he is not religious, took a purely secular approach to the project and was able to pinpoint the exact location using the ‘scientific method’ and triangulated data from the texts of all three Abrahamic religions.”

Here's the truth: you can't use the "scientific method" to disprove the spiritual reality of the Resurrection of Jesus. Christianity does not rest on buried bones or lost artifacts. It rests on the historical, witnessed and prophesied Resurrection of Jesus Christ. His tomb is empty not because we lost it—but because He is risen.

The Bible is clear: "He is not here, but is risen" (Luke 24:6). After His Resurrection, Jesus appeared to more than 500 people before ascending to heaven (1 Cor. 15:6). Acts 1:9 tells us He ascended before the very eyes of His disciples, and Scripture affirms that He is now seated at the right hand of the Father until His return.

Articles like this aren't just misleading—they are spiritually dangerous. They aim to cast doubt on the truth of Scripture and distract people from the hope found only in Jesus. But Jesus is not in a cave in Egypt. He is not waiting to be unearthed by secular scientists and put on display in the Grand Egyptian Museum. He is alive, He is coming back and He is not a relic of the past—He is the risen Savior and King.

So, no, Daily Star, you didn't find the body of Jesus. Because it's not here. It never will be. That's what separates Him from every other religious figure in history.

He. Is. Risen. And no pyramid scan or headline can ever change that.
