

New Trump Ad: 'Hillary Clinton Only Cares About Power, Money and Herself'

Wednesday morning, Donald Trump's presidential campaign released a new 30-second television ad titled "Corruption" that highlights how it alleges the Clinton family accrued their wealth through pay-to-play scandals and usage of the Clinton Foundation as a front to make money.

The ad features a narrator's voiceover, recounting the details:

The Clintons: from dead broke to worth hundreds of millions.

So how did Hillary end up filthy rich?

Pay to play politics. Staggering amounts of cash poured into the Clinton Foundation from criminals, dictators, countries that hate America.

Hillary cut deals for donors.

Sold out American workers, exploited Haitians in need, she even gave American uranium rights to the Russians.

Hillary Clinton only cares about power, money and herself.

Like all the other recent ads, "Corruption" will air nationally, and will be heavily rotated into battleground states. Specific details of the ad buy weren't announced. Campaign spokesman Jason Miller said that while Clinton "knows nothing" about job creation, she knows a lot about "how to make money by abusing" government jobs.

"The Clintons have made a living out of selling government access to Wall Street donors and special interests in exchange for donations to their slush fund conspicuously disguised as the Clinton Foundation,” he added. “Hillary Clinton might be the single most corrupt candidate to ever seek the presidency and should be disqualified for her inability to tell truths to the American people.”
