

'Not Our Children': Moms for America Equips Mothers to Fight 'School Porn'

Moms are rising up to protect children from increasingly explicit school-based sex education that's "really a form of perverse indoctrination," said Kimberly Fletcher, founder and president of Moms for America.

"Most people don't believe it could be this bad until they look at some of the materials and videos aimed at children," Fletcher said. "When moms see this 'school porn' stuff, they are shocked. Then they are angry. They say, 'Not our children.' Then they band together and act. We're here to help empower them to effectively fight these evil people who are corrupting our children."

The problem is not just in public schools, Fletcher noted. Moms at two exclusive private schools blew the whistle recently on a "porn literacy class" taught by an instructor who insists that there are far more genders than the two sexes of male and female, and that porn is a positive influence.

"The 'presentation' soft-peddles porn," Fletcher said. "Much of it is so disgusting that I won't describe it."

One mother told The Post, that "Most parents feel the same way I do about not going public but at the same time we're incredibly frustrated by what's going on. None of the parents knew this was planned. We were completely left in the dark. It makes us wonder what else the school is up to."

"We are furious," another mother told The Post. "We were horrified to learn this was shown to our first-grade 6- and 7-year-old kids without our knowledge or consent. But it's so hard to fight back because you'll get canceled and your child will suffer.”

“This is why we launched Moms for America,” Fletcher said. “No mother should feel alone in fighting for her child’s innocence and wellbeing.”

In Illinois, leftist legislators have introduced the “Responsible Education for Adolescent and Children’s Health,” (REACH Act). If enacted, it would mandate sex education starting in kindergarten and continuing through 12th grade.

In California, which has had “comprehensive sex ed” in elementary schools for years, a group of moms protested outside the office of a liberal state senator who promotes explicit sex education. The children are also taught about gender identity, sexual orientation and sexuality during other school subjects that have no opt-out provision.

“The birds and the bees are not that complicated,” Fletcher said. “It takes only a few hours to explain them at an appropriate age. What they really want is to steal children’s innocence and set them up for early experimentation, followed by abortions and a flood of sexually transmitted infections.”

Moms for America is also helping moms oppose critical race theory, mask mandates and vaccine mandates.

Preparations are underway for MomRise 2021, a national gathering of mothers slated in October and hosted by Moms for America. MomRise will bring moms together from across the country (in person or via livestream) to encourage and empower them and help moms realize the powerful influence they have in our homes, communities and through our votes.

As part of its mission, Moms for America produces a podcast with nationally recognized leaders, an interactive, digital MomLinks Magazine and hosts Cottage Meetings in homes and online during the summer. {eoa}
