

Now Introducing: President Putin and Vice President Trump

Yesterday included many more struggles for President Biden during both the NATO Summit and his high-stakes press conference.

Introducing Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky to speak, Biden called him by Russian President Vladimir Putin's name instead.

"Now I want to hand it over to the President of Ukraine who has much courage as he has determination. Ladies and gentlemen, President Putin," the president said.

Biden attempted to make up for the mistake by saying, "We're gonna beat President Putin. President Zelensky. I was so focused on beating Putin." This happened after other people in the room shouted out Zelensky's name as a correction to Biden.

What could be worse than calling out the name of a nation's enemy as their president when the two are caught up in a contentious war? Mixing up the name of your own vice president with your presidential race opponent just may be the icing on the cake.

Mixing up Kamala Harris' name with Donald Trump, Biden said, "I wouldn't have picked vice president Trump to be vice president, though I think she was not qualified to be president.”

Trump picked up this gaffe and posted it to his Truth social platform joking, “Great job, Joe!”

He also picked up Biden’s mistake of saying he was “following the advice of my commander-in-chief.”

Despite his falls, the president has made it quite clear that unless the Lord Almighty Himself tells him to exit the race, he will push forward with his campaign.
