

Once-Paralyzed Pastor Knox Dances at Holiday Celebration

✘ Remember Delia

Knox, the music minister who stood up and walked out of a wheelchair that held her captive for 22 years? Well, now she's not only walking—she's dancing.

Knox, a popular singer who pastors Living World Christian Center in Mobile, Ala., with her husband, Bishop Levy Knox, had been paralyzed since a car accident on Christmas Day 1987. A video captured her miraculous healing at the Bay of the Holy Spirit Revival at the Mobile Convention Center in September.

On Thursday night, the Knoxes will host "A Night With the King—Celebrating the Miracle." The night has been organized to celebrate the miracle God performed in Knox's life. A tweet Knox distributed said, "It's Time to Dance! One Night With the King! A Christmas Celebration 23 years in the making!" The celebration will feature artist Adlan Cruz at The Battle House Hotel Crystal Ballroom.

Check out the video of Knox walking on stage giving praise to God a couple months after her miraculous healing.

{youtube}Y1YxJfLKF7c{/youtube}

PLUS: Pastor

Mark Wyatt, who witnessed Delia Knox's miraculous healing up-close, offers insight into why some people refuse to believe in miracles even after seeing them. To read his article, click here.

Does Knox's miracle inspire your faith?