

Pat Robertson Asks Donald Trump Point Blank About Scandals

Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump visited Regent University over the weekend, sitting down with CBN founder Pat Robertson for an exclusive interview.

Trump has fallen behind in the polls, and that's partly because of his troubles with women voters.

In their extensive, wide-ranging interview, Trump addressed that issue, speaking about his respect for women and how he has elevated many women to top positions in his business.

Robertson also asked him about the economy and jobs, the scandalous way America's veterans have been treated by the government, Hillary Clinton's extreme views on partial-birth abortion and gun control, and what's at stake with the U.S. Supreme Court.

{eoa}

Reprinted with permission from . Copyright The Christian Broadcasting Network, Inc., All rights reserved.