

Peace In the Middle East

A documentary that follows a Palestinian Muslim, a  Palestinian Christian and an Israeli Jew's journey to bring peace in the West Bank, Tel Aviv and Jerusalem won this year's Reel Rose Award for Best Documentary at the John Paul II International Film Festival.

In Little Town of Bethlehem, three men born into violence are determined to risk everything to bring peace between their respective religions.

Director Jim Hanon says his documentary doesn't land on one religious side but instead highlights the need for peace among religions and the biblical model of loving your enemies.

Still, producer Mart Green, whose film company has backed other award-winners, hopes the film prompts audiences to at least ask this question: "Might love be the greatest weapon of all?"
