

Perry Stone's Warning to America About the Next Coming Attack

Is the next attack coming to America?

In a new message, Perry Stone is warning Americans about the potential next attack that could be coming to the United States.

Stone provided information he claims to have had a source give him from the dark web regarding the Cloud Strike incident that glitched the technological systems of companies around the world, including major airlines, delaying flights for days. Stone has never used the dark web, but according to his source, it was known on the dark web not to travel over those coming days.

"I do know people who have monitored it [the dark web], and are presently monitoring the information on it. They just come on as a person, just as a regular person," Stone says.

"The information I am giving you comes out of the dark web," he continues. "He said to me personally sitting at a table [that] two weeks before the Cloud Strike antivirus software failed and caused all of these delays, there was a warning on the dark web to avoid traveling around that time frame because all the majority of planes would be grounded."
