

Popular Pastors Show Off Their Hidden Musical Talents During Coronavirus Quarantine

Popular megachurch pastors are showing off their musical abilities this week during coronavirus quarantines.

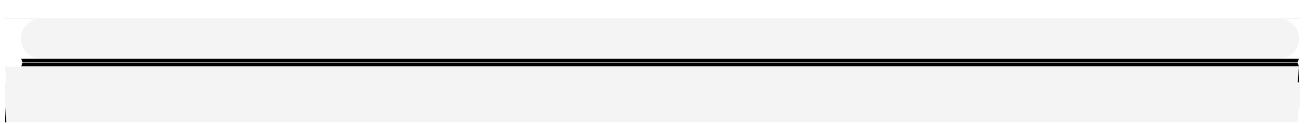

With all the stress, anxiety and worry people are struggling with during the pandemic, these pastors wanted to encourage people to fix their eyes on Jesus—and have a little fun.

Pastor Greg Laurie played a musical rendition of “Humble Thyself” on the guitar before sharing profound insights into loving those you’re stuck at home with.

“Let’s be kind to each other as we are spending so much time together,” he wrote. Watch his song and message below:

View this post on Instagram

Highlands family, I just wanted to give you a quick word of encouragement today and update you on our plans for this weekend. Know that I love you and I'm praying for you. A couple details: – Join us for 30 minutes of prayer and worship this Saturday at 9:00am. – Sunday services will stream live online at 8:00am, 9:45am, and 11:30am. Available afterwards on demand. – You can let us know about specific needs or prayer requests you may have during this time at • Check out my story for a few outtakes at the piano.

A post shared by Chris Hodges (@pastorchrishodges) on Mar 25, 2020 at 10:40am PDT

Pastor Jentezen Franklin—a spiritual adviser to Trump and pastor of Free Chapel—showed off his impressive skills with the saxophone, with the songs “10,000 Reasons” and “Worthy of It All” with Matt Redman.

View this post on Instagram

A post shared by jackngraham (@jackngraham) on Apr 15, 2020 at 6:46pm PDT

What do you think of these pastors' hidden musical talents?
Let us know in the comments below!