

Prayer Receives Massive Applause From Crowd at Secular Rally With RFK Jr.

Robert F. Kennedy Jr., son of the late Robert F. Kennedy and nephew of the late President John F. Kennedy, told a large crowd at a rally in Arizona on the campaign trail for the 2024 presidential election that he wakes up and prays for 30 minutes every day when he gets out of bed. This admission prompted an eruption of applause from the audience that lasted 30 seconds.

Has prayer ever received such a standing ovation during a secular rally? Given the overt and disguised secularization of America over the last century, it's likely that prayer has not been celebrated in a political arena so raucously and genuinely since the American Revolution and the founding of the United States of America as a constitutional republic. Prayer by America's top leaders may be the new counterculture and "cool" thing to support.

Kennedy was not praying aimlessly or ritualistically, however. He was praying specifically to help make America healthy again. God's response to his prayer stunned him.

After praying for two decades, Kennedy quipped about the answer to his prayer: "God sent me Donald Trump."
