

President Obama Continues to Divide Americans

It is no secret that America is deeply divided today, due in no small part to the words and actions of our president. Unfortunately, rather than drawing us together as we approach the 2016 elections, President Obama continues to divide us.

First, there was his appeal to African-Americans, insinuating that if they didn't get out and vote (meaning for Hillary Clinton) it would be a personal insult to him and a blemish on his legacy.

Next, there was his claim that the only reason Americans would not vote for Hillary was that they were sexist, not wanting a woman to lead the country, a woman who, in his eyes, was infinitely more qualified to be president than Donald Trump.

As reported by the U.K.'s Independent, "During an impassioned speech to the Congressional Black Caucus Foundation, an organization that carries out research on issues affecting African-Americans, Mr. Obama said it would be an 'insult to his legacy' if the black community voted for Donald Trump
