

Prince Andrew's 'Two-Home' Demands Expose Royal Tug-of-War

Prince Andrew is reportedly seeking a dual-property arrangement as a condition to vacate Royal Lodge, his 30-room Windsor residence. The proposal involves taking over both Frogmore Cottage—formerly occupied by Prince Harry and Meghan Markle—and Adelaide Cottage, expected to be vacated by Prince William and Princess Kate. Andrew's lease on Royal Lodge extends until 2078, complicating the royal household's efforts to downsize his living arrangements.

According to reports, Andrew has resisted King Charles III's push for him to relocate, citing both legal standing and personal preference. While he has expressed openness to negotiating an exit, his demand for two high-profile properties has drawn scrutiny from royal analysts, who say it reflects a disconnect between public expectations and royal privilege.
