

Project Veritas Part II: 'Voter Fraud on a Massive Scale'

The Democratic National Committee and the Hillary Clinton campaign have been engaged in voter fraud "on a massive scale" in a new video released by journalist James O'Keefe and his Project Veritas.

In the second video of an ongoing, explosive series, Democratic party operatives tell us how to successfully commit voter fraud on a massive scale. Scott Foval, who has since been fired, admits that the Democrats have been rigging elections for "50 years."

There are connections to George Soros, as well. But the language these political operatives use is so vile and vulgar, we can't share the video with you.

Foval, who used to work for the Soros-funded People for the American Way organization was working for an organization, Americans United for Change, at the time the video was recorded. He said in the undercover video that he paid homeless people and others who suffered from mental illness to engage in activities meant to disrupt the Donald Trump campaign.

He also discussed the ways in which Democrats would bus in out-of-state voters to impact elections, even going so far as to explain how it was done to avoid getting caught. He accused Republicans of rigging elections using voting laws, then made this admission:

"We did it to them when we were in charge too. We did the exact same thing, only we manipulated the vote with money and action, not laws ...

"It's a very easy thing for Republicans to say, 'Well, they're bussing people in.' Well, you know what? We've been bussing people in to deal with you [expletive] for 50 years and we're not going to stop now. We're just going to find a different way to do it."

To avoid being identified with large busses pulling up to voting precincts, Foval said the campaigns now have the voters use their personal vehicles, or rental vehicles, to better avoid detection—and charges of conspiracy.

"If the car has a Wisconsin license plate and it's owned by a third entity, then it's much harder to prove that these people drove in from out of state," he said. "There's no bus involved, so you can't prove conspiracy."

Foval also explained how the illegal voters can obtain local voter registrations. He also explained how the campaign is able to avoid trouble when they get caught by members of the media.

He also led the investigators to Bob Cramer, the husband of a Democratic congresswoman from Illinois who now operates Democracy Partners. In a recorded conversation with another Project Veritas operative, he said he was willing to help register illegal voters on a large scale to help Clinton's chances in the November election.

"We'll help you do this," he said after being explained details of a potential illegal voter registration effort targeting Hispanics. "I mean, this is very important stuff. Turnout is huge, huge, huge."

So far, the video has been viewed 1.5 million times. O'Keefe said that following the release of his first video, a number of news outlets had lined up interviews with him, but later "spiked" them out of fear of retaliation from Clinton, if she were to win the election.