

Prophet: God Is Raising Up an Army of End-Times Messengers, Prophetic Activists

Prophet Jeremiah Johnson says that though believers long for revival on the earth, many aren't willing to rise to the level of commitment and consecration it will take to bring the awakening and reformation that has been prophesied.

The Holy Spirit, Johnson says, is daring those who are hungry to seek Him in a new way. And He is looking for followers who are willing to pay the price and consecrate themselves fully to Him. When that happens, God will manifest His kingdom fully on the earth.

"There are a lot of people following a god made in their own image and not the God of the Scriptures," Johnson told Dr. Steve Greene on a recent episode of "Greenelines" on the Charisma Podcast Network. "Practically, we need to get in a place of prayer and say, 'Lord, do I know you? Do I know the Lamb that went to Calvary? Do I know that Jesus, the God of Genesis and the God of Revelation?'

"God's people need to give themselves completely to Him and His kingdom purpose. Believers need to set Jesus before their eyes and live as a bride eagerly awaiting the returning bridegroom. The Bible says many will be offended at His return. I want to make sure that this generation has a revelation of the real Jesus, and that they're prepared and they're sharing the real Jesus with all they run to.

"A lot of the prophetic mandate that I'm carrying is, I believe God has asked me to raise up an army of end-time messengers and prophetic activists. We can do more than pray. You need to use what God has given you in your various spheres of influence. I really want to see the church activated, mobilized and empowered.”

For more of the prophetic word God gave Jeremiah Johnson, and his ministry, listen to this podcast. {eo}