

Report: FBI Continues to Investigate Clinton Foundation

Regardless of what you might have heard from the liberal mainstream media, the FBI continues to investigate the pay-for-play schemes of Bill and Hillary Clinton and the Clinton Foundation.

As The Daily Caller reports, it's "full bore ahead":

FBI agents across the country are continuing to actively pursue a broad political corruption investigation of the Clinton Foundation, a probe that is consuming the resources in the FBI's Little Rock, Ark., field office where every agent assigned to public corruption matters now is working on the case, The Daily Caller News Foundation's Investigative Group has learned.

"Everybody's working the foundation in Little Rock," a former senior FBI official told TheDCNF. There at least 10 agents involved, but it's possible the Little Rock field office is "pulling bodies from other programs." ...

Little Rock is important to the investigation because the Clinton Foundation was founded there in 1997 in that state's capital where Bill Clinton served multiple terms as governor. The controversial charity was originally registered there and was granted federal tax exemption solely for the purpose of building and operating Clinton's presidential library.
