

Seahawks MVP and Coach Give Thanks to God After Super Bowl Victory

Seattle is celebrating today after the Seahawks won their second Super Bowl ever last night, defeating the New England Patriots 29-13.

The team's "dark side" defense dominated Patriots QB Drake Maye, sacking him six times and holding the New England offense scoreless through three quarters.

Seattle kicker Jason Myers set a Super Bowl record, making 5 field goals to keep his team in the lead.

And the game's MVP, Seahawks running back Kenneth Walker III, ran the ball for 135 yards. He became the first running back to win a Super Bowl MVP award in 28 years. After the game, Walker honored the Lord, saying, "First and foremost, I want to thank God for this blessing to be here..."

And during the trophy ceremony, Seattle Coach Mike Macdonald gave the credit to God, saying, "I believe God called me to be a coach and I listened to Him and I thank Him. We are incredibly blessed to be Seahawks, to be 12s. And now, we're world champions."
