

Should Israel Accept Trump's 'Deal of the Century' Peace Plan?

In a surprising turn of events, Jewish leaders and organizations are now campaigning against sovereignty. President Trump's "Deal of the Century" peace plan has called for sovereignty to be applied over 30% of the West Bank in Israel. However, new stipulations in the plan make it seem like political suicide for Israel to go through with the American plans for peace.

This week, we interviewed our good friend Nati Rom from the Shiloh hills in Samaria. Rom is a lawyer, human-rights activist, spokesman for Judea and Samaria and most importantly, a pioneer in Israel's biblical heartland.

You don't want to miss out on the incredible things Rom has to say about whether or not Israel should apply sovereignty in Judea and Samaria.

Rom is not alone either in his concerns for the application of Trump's peace plan. Many organizations and leaders in Israel and worldwide are joining the movement against the acceptance of the "Deal of the Century" and applying partial sovereignty to the heartland.

Why would Jews be against applying sovereignty in their own country? Listen in to today's show to hear cutting-edge developments that are just now coming to light.

Will Israel be forced to accept the reality of a Palestinian state? Will a complete building freeze be imposed on the communities in Judea and Samaria?
