

Si Robertson Duets With Country Singer Kix Brooks on New EP

Duck Dynasty's Silas "Si" Robertson released a six-song EP, titled Me and My Smoking Hot Honey, on iTunes Tuesday.

The project features a duet with country singer Kix Brooks called "Can't Take the Swamp Outta the Man," which Robertson recorded to surprise his wife of 43 years, Christine, at their vow renewal last month.

The song played as Christine Robertson walked down the aisle.

"There just ain't no 'mount of money," Brooks sings, to which Robertson sings back, "That can change me and my smoking hot honey."

"My roots will always stay in my southern bayou state, because you can the boy out of the swamp," the former Brooks and Dunn singer croons.

"But you can't take the swamp outta the man. That's my land," Robertson adds.

Robertson says he enjoyed making the EP so much that he may become a full-time country singer.

"I'm gonna make this my new career choice," he said when he first heard the finished song. "I had a blast!"

Robertson, known as "America's Favorite Uncle," also sings on a track with the Mauldin Brothers.

Click here to check out his new tunes.