

‘Sound of Freedom’ Star Caviezel Blasts Pope, Politicians, Apathetic Christians

 While promoting President Donald Trump’s upcoming screening of the new hit movie “Sound of Freedom,” actor Jim Caviezel called out Pope Francis for staying silent about child sex trafficking.

“I’m begging you, Pope of the Roman Catholic Church. What are you doing? Why are you staying silent? Why won’t you speak out?” says Caviezel in an interview with Steve Bannon on “War Room,” one of the top political podcasts in America and a core program on the Real America Voice (RAV) platform. “Don’t you fear the Father in heaven? Don’t you fear the Holy Spirit? Are you a Rothschild Pope? Answer that.”

Caviezel, who plays real-life, pro-child rescuing hero Tim Ballard in the movie, also criticized weak politicians, “emasculated men” and Christians who have done nothing to fight this scourge of sex with underaged kids. It’s a topic that Hollywood refuses to admit because of rampant pedophilia that left-wing extremists are trying to normalize in light of the moral breakdown in America.

Caviezel tells Bannon, “God is going to put a wrath on this nation like you’ve never understood. There is going to be fire and brimstone on the earth, like you have never seen. He’s going to have to apologize to Sodom and Gomorrah if He doesn’t take care of what is happening now.”

God’s Children are Not for Sale

One of the memorable lines from "Sound of Freedom" is when the former law enforcement agent Ballard says, "God's children are not for sale." This serves for believers and freedom-fighters as motivation why child sex trafficking must be eradicated. The business of selling children for sex has become the equivalent to a global epidemic, Caviezel asserts.

The U.S. State Department posted the following statement on their official government site in January 2023: "Human trafficking is a crime that deprives millions of people of their dignity and freedom. An estimated 27.6 million are currently victims of trafficking worldwide, and, sadly, many of them are often hidden right in front of us. To properly tackle this crime, it will take a commitment from each of us to end human trafficking. Targeted awareness and outreach efforts are essential."

Human trafficking, which includes sex slavery and forced labor, is a $150 billion business every year in illicit profits, according to the website. The movie mentions this fact as well, but ironically, the mainstream media have accused this information in the movie to be untrue or an exaggeration, dismissing it as a "QAnon conspiracy" of "right-wing extremism." Losing credibility, the journalists never bothered to check whether the US government is the source of this information based on facts.

What has happened to the more than 85,000 children who have crossed over the porous U.S. southern border in the past two years and, according to a whistleblower, then disappeared? The government lost track of them, and sources on the ground reportedly believe that some of them have fallen into the hands of human traffickers.

The mainstream corporate media are not reporting it in any meaningful way. Ironically, the Biden Administration continues to insist that the open border is not a problem, as pointed out by Caviezel on Bannon's program.

Taking a pro-Christian stance, this new movie faces increasingly fierce opposition in the media, in government and in the entertainment industry. The mainstream media, including Rolling Stone magazine, the Guardian and CNN, is attacking the movie, pretending that child sex trafficking is not really a big issue—even though the shocking statistics about the extent of trafficking come from the government.

Ignoring the facts about true sin and evil in the world, journalists in the mainstream media are making false accusations against the movie in order to discredit it. They don't like the message in the movie that Jesus said, "Whosoever shall cause one of these little ones who believe in Me to fall, it were better for him that a millstone were hung about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea."

The only people who benefit from hiding the truth and minimizing awareness about child trafficking are pedophiles.

In recent months, President Biden has de-prioritized child trafficking as a national issue, while, simultaneously, prioritizing protection of "trans" people to perform drag queen shows in front of children. Who is responsible for putting Biden into power to expedite an anti-Christian agenda that cares more about men dressed as women than cares about all the little, innocent children? What is the priority of the Biden Administration in the wake of this good vs. evil fight for the soul of America?

Biden's Department of Justice recently removed important portions regarding child sex trafficking from its website. Information on "International Sex Trafficking of Minors," "Domestic Sex Trafficking of Minors" and "Child Victims of Prostitution" was deleted. Townhall, a secular media site, reported a warning that sex trafficking can involve "the cross-border transportation of children."

This raises questions about not only why Biden is allowing the southern border of the United States to be open to incoming illegal immigrants, but also how an open border creates an environment for increased human trafficking, especially by the cartels. "Sound of Freedom" highlights several issues, including the illegal transportation of children across borders for the pleasure of pedophiles.

Disney, which bought Twenty-First Century Fox five years ago, tried hard to squash this anti-pedophilia movie. Twenty-First Century Fox had the rights to this movie at the time. However, Angels Studios, which is known for bringing the popular series "The Chosen" to the world, gave Mickey Mouse a wake-up call by acquiring the rights this year and distributing "Sound of Freedom," beating Disney's "Indiana Jones" movie at the box office on July 4th.

Poking fun at Hollywood, The Babylon Bee published a humorous story entitled, "Hollywood Confused by New Movie that Depicts Child Sex Trafficking as Bad." This is supposed to be satire, yet it rings oddly true in a world where good has become evil and evil has become good.

It's no joke, however, that former President Donald Trump is now stepping into the ring once again to fight the evil of child sex trafficking, just as he did in his first administration. As a first step to raise awareness, Trump announced on Thursday, July 13 that he will host a screening of "Sound of Freedom" at the Trump National Golf Club Bedminster in New Jersey on July 19.

President Trump will be joined by filmmaker Eduardo Verástegui, actor Jim Caviezel and Tim Ballard, the federal agent who quit his job to go rescue children from sex slavery. Ballard is the founder of Operation Underground Railroad with the mission to end child sex trafficking.

In this battle for the soul of America – whether to concede to evil that tacitly supports sex with children, or to fight to protect “the little ones” whom the Lord Jesus cares so much about – a critical question emerges for the Christian community: what will every Spirit-filled Christian do, either in the box office, within the local community or in the voting booth?

Not even the Pope is immune to criticism for doing nothing and staying silent. While Catholics, such as Caviezel, Verástegui and Bannon, are voicing the call to set children free from sex slavery, the Pentecostal and charismatic communities have an opportunity to step up in the power of the Holy Spirit, boldly and unafraid, and make an impact to end what is now considered the largest scale of human slavery in the history of the world.

The Holy Spirit knows where every enslaved child is who is being sold five to 10 times a day for sex. The Holy Spirit sees into the heart of every pedophile, who funds a $150 billion-a-year-business. For how much longer can too many Christians around the world do nothing and stay silent about child sex slavery?

What’s more important—the “right” of a man dressed as a woman to shake his bum-bum in the face of a child at ‘drag queen’ showtime so he feels “seen” and superficially “validated,” or rescuing a child from the soul-crushing, enormously harmful, pure evil of sex slavery?

Showtime is over. The sound of freedom has now been heard. With the attention that Trump is bringing to “Sound of Freedom” and the anti-human trafficking cause overall, child sex slavery may become one of the defining issues of the 2024 Presidential election. {eoa}
