

Star Trek Celeb Takes Bold Stand Against Christian Persecution

The man who plays Professor X in the X Men movies knows a thing or two about protecting those whom society deems to be different, and consequently attacked.

Unfortunately, there's no such thing as Xavier's School for Gifted Youngsters in reality, so Patrick Stewart is taking his persecution platform to YouTube.

"When it comes to protecting civil liberties and human rights, you cannot be too active and too determined, no matter what the matters are," Stewart says.

But do human rights apply to personal choices—like refusing to bake a cake for a gay wedding?

Watch the video to see what he says ... given that Stewart's dear friend is the out-and-proud Sir Ian McKellan, his answer may surprise you.