

Study: Two-Thirds of Americans Believe Transgenderism Isn't Healthy

, in partnership with McLaughlin and Associates—one of America's most respected polling survey firms—is releasing the results of a recent national survey. Results were from a survey of 1,000 likely general election voters nationwide and was conducted Apr. 22 through Apr. 26.

“Everywhere Americans look, the media and education culture is bombarding us with relentless, daily messages in support of transgenderism without limits. Despite this intensity, these stunning numbers show plainly that the vast majority of Americans aren't buying what they're being sold. A huge majority of Americans don't think this issue belongs anywhere near our kids,” said Dr. Jeff Myers, President of . “Yet, we also see a powerful chilling effect that this propaganda is having on society, as this research shows that tens of millions disagree with what they see, but are afraid to say anything about their views. We trust this poll will spark all-important conversations so we can properly address these issues as a nation.”

All interviews were conducted online; survey invitations were distributed randomly within predetermined geographic units. These units were structured to correlate with actual voter turnout in the general election. This poll of 1,000 general election voters has an accuracy of +/- 3.1% at a 95% confidence interval.

The complete polling report can be found here.

KEY INSIGHT: Of those American voters who offered an opinion on the issue, a majority believes transgenderism is not a healthy human condition. But over one-third stay silent on the issue:

- 64% of American voters who have an opinion about the issue do not believe transgenderism is a healthy human condition
- 34% stay silent on the issue to not offend others
- 30% are willing to speak out on the issue
- 36% of American voters who have an opinion about the issue believe transgenderism is a healthy human condition

KEY INSIGHT: Almost three-fourths of American voters who offered an opinion on the issue oppose teaching sexual-based curriculum in elementary school:

- 72% of American voters who have an opinion on the issue do not believe schools should teach about sexual identity and sexual behavior with elementary-age children
- 42% believe it is inappropriate in a school setting
- 30% believe it is dangerous and could lead to children being groomed for sexual encounters at a young age
- 28% of American voters who have an opinion on the issue believe it is a perfectly appropriate use of instruction time

KEY INSIGHT: A vast majority of American voters who offered an opinion on the issue say it's possible to know the difference between men and women:

- 93% of American voters who have an opinion on the issue believe it is possible to distinguish between men and women.
- 7% of American voters who have an opinion on the issue don't believe it is possible to distinguish between men and women

KEY INSIGHT: A total of 90% of American voters who offered an opinion on the issue say underage minors should not be allowed to undergo permanent gender alteration:

- 90% of American voters who have an opinion on the issue say minors should be required to wait until they are legal adults before undergoing permanent gender alteration
- 10% of American voters who have an opinion on the issue say minors should be encouraged to undergo permanent gender alteration

KEY INSIGHT: A total of 90% of American voters who offered an opinion on the issue believe that medical professionals should be required to disclose side effects of gender-altering procedures:

- 90% of American voters who have an opinion on the issue believe that medical professionals performing gender-altering procedures be required by law to disclose the common, long-term medical and psychological impact of such procedures
- 10% of American voters who have an opinion on the issue believe that medical professionals performing gender-altering procedures should not be required by law to disclose the common, long-term medical and psychological impact of such procedures. {eoa}

Founded in 1962, Summit Ministries' mission is to equip and support rising generations to embrace God's truth and champion a biblical worldview. Summit's iconic two-week conferences for young adults have trained tens of thousands of today's business innovators, cultural influencers, government officials and church leaders. Its books and training courses equip hundreds of thousands of people a year to be confident in biblical truth.

Read articles like this one and other Spirit-led content in our new platform, CHARISMA PLUS.