

Talk Radio Host Announces He's on the Cruz Crew

Ben Ferguson, the youngest nationally syndicated radio talk show host in America, was fulfilling his duties as a CNN political commentator Wednesday night when he made a surprise announcement.

"I am formally endorsing Ted Cruz tonight for one reason," said Ferguson. "And that is the fact that I do not believe Donald Trump is going to be able to bring everyone together. I do not believe he has a solid path forward when it comes to the actual issues that he claims he cares about."

Ferguson said the Republican front-runner's past bothered him and others. Claiming Trump's inability to win voter majorities in many states is a liability, he said the businessman has more people voting against him than for him.

"Now as long as you have a three-man race, that works to Trump's advantage," he continued. "But there are more conservatives now that are more frustrated with Donald Trump than ever before because they are concerned about his past."
