

The Day the Demonic Won at the Grammys

In a broken and lost world, we frequently see the wrong things get praised and lifted up on a pedestal. This can be seen in none other than the winning nominee for best new artist at the Grammys.

Chappell Roan, who is known for her lavish outfits and makeup that represent a drag queen, was given the award for best new artist.

Roan vowed in her acceptance speech that she would “...demand that labels and the industry profiting millions of dollars off of artists would offer a livable wage and healthcare, especially to developing artists.”

Yet, besides trying to be a champion for upcoming artists, there's a dark agenda behind Roan's music. Dressing and advocating for drag queens and being known as the big “queer” pop singer, Roan is ultimately summoning demonic forces in her music. Perhaps what is even sadder, is that Roan is likely performing in this way out of spite for her upbringing.

Speaking to left-leaning outlets, the singer has previously talked about growing up in a conservative, Christian household and feeling like she “...just couldn't handle feeling ashamed.” This, unfortunately, is the case for so many who have left the church, especially for Gen Z. Instead of reaching out to God, the imperfection of the church body itself has driven the masses away and straight into the line of hellfire.

Roan's music was even used in United Methodist Church in honor of pride month last year, according The News and Observer. This in itself may show how fractured the church truly is becoming. Take for instance drag queen "Flamy Grant's" appearance at the GMA Dove Awards. We are in a state right now where if people aren't walking away from the church, they are trying to change it from the inside out.

During these times, we need to pray for those who are being deceived by Satan's power, especially those who have fallen into the lies of the LGBTQ+ community as they search for truth and hope. Pray that their eyes would be opened to the truth, and that the truth would set them free.
