

The Fruit of Willingness and Faith-Filled Obedience in Business

Imagine being cheated out of thousands of dollars at a time of your life when you're broke and trying to support your family. Then after God asks you to forgive the person, He later leads you to go back and work with the same person who cheated you in business.

Would you do it?

Josh Osborne, the founder and operator of Colorado Springs Fence Company in Colorado Springs, Colorado, was faced with this exact situation. He decided in his heart (willingness) and through his faith-filled actions (obedience) that he would trust God no matter what. As a result, he received the promises of God in his business and is now experiencing the freedom to pursue the things that are on his heart as a minister in the marketplace.

It doesn't always "feel" good to respond to the Lord's instructions but aligning yourself with His mindset and ways creates an atmosphere for experiencing His best.

Listen to this episode of The Kingdom Driven Entrepreneur podcast to hear Josh's story. It is a powerful example of the goodness that results when you're willing to be obedient to the Lord despite your feelings. {eoa}
