

The Miracle That Brought This Woman's Dead Heart Back to Life

Jennifer Eivaz had just finished leading a prayer conference and felt satisfied with the outcome. But God had more work to do—in her own heart.

“In the middle of the night, the Holy Spirit appeared in my room, just a tremendous glory, a tremendous power,” Eivaz says on the “Take 10 With Jenn” supernatural podcast on the Charisma Podcast Network. “And He picked me up out of the bed ... and He brought me, in the most tender way, He brought me to His chest in a brief but life-changing holy embrace. Upon contact, I felt something from Him drop into my heart.”

The “heart” she refers to, explains Eivaz, is not the muscle that pumps blood through our bodies. “I’m referring to the spiritual part of us where our emotions and our desires dwell, something the Bible mentions almost 300 times,” she says, adding, “My heart was miraculously resuscitated by that encounter.”

A heart doesn’t need to be resuscitated unless it has stopped or died. So the Lord revealed to Eivaz that “large parts of my heart had died. ... because of grief and sorrow and betrayal and pain and loss and so many other things. ... I had killed off my own heart from today’s pain, and I didn’t have feeling anymore, I didn’t have care anymore in those dead places.”
