

The Next Jesus Movement? Prophetic Voices Speak on Revival and Anointing

In a recent conversation between prophetic voice Joseph Z and Pastor Mike Signorelli of V1 Church, a recurring theme emerged—a season of revival, anointing and divine preparation.

Against the backdrop of a world in turmoil, both men spoke with conviction about an imminent Jesus movement and the urgency for believers to take their role seriously in what God is unfolding.

Signorelli, known for his powerful deliverance ministry, shared that his recent experiences with prophecy have been strikingly immediate. While speaking at an event in Manhattan, he declared that a major figure would turn to Christ, even as a biblical scholar was being invited to appear on Joe Rogan's podcast to advocate for Christianity.

"While I was prophesying it, the Joe Rogan episode was being confirmed and then it happened," Signorelli says. "I believe we're feeling the groundswell of this next movement."

Joseph Z, who has built a reputation for prophetic clarity, echoed this sentiment, emphasizing that the church is stepping into a season of divine positioning.

"I believe we're in extended grace right now," he says. "What we do in this time will either hasten or lengthen what's coming next."

The takeaway? Obedience is critical. "Some people need to clear their schedule," he urged, "because their plans are getting in the way of God's plans."

For Signorelli, revival isn't just a church event—it's hitting homes and families. "I see prodigals returning," he says. "The next revival will be God reviving families, restoring marriages and fulfilling longstanding prophetic words over households."

The conversation took a deeply prophetic turn when Z spoke a spontaneous word over Signorelli about train tracks—a symbol of expansion, provision and apostolic breakthrough. What he didn't know is that Signorelli's team had already been using that exact imagery.

"I feel like the Lord is connecting regions like He did for Vanderbilt through the train tracks," Signorelli confirmed, his voice breaking. "That word was so accurate—I'm literally fasting through this transition right now."

Perhaps most striking was the shared sense of urgency. Revival is not an event on the horizon; it is unfolding now. But it won't come without spiritual warfare and preparation.

"Wherever there's pressure, there's going to be a greater release of the prophetic," Signorelli says. "Instead of weakening under the pressure, I get excited—because I know the Red Sea is about to part."

If these prophetic voices are right, this is a defining moment for the church. It is not a time for passivity, but for pressing in, "The enemy has fought you, but he will not prevail. The gates of the city are being opened. The Spirit of the Breaker is here."
