

‘The Princess of Hell’: Watchdog Warnings, Satanic Shows Are Targeting Your Kids

Children are being targeted once again with occultic entertainment. A handful of satanic-themed shows will be released in the coming months with stories that try to make witchcraft, demons and even sex with the devil look appealing.

The family-friendly entertainment organization Movieguide® and a watchdog group, Parents Television & Media Council, are sounding the alarm on two series that primarily cater to children.

Movieguide® has already garnered petition signatures from 20,000 with the goal of stopping the release of Pauline, a satanic series on the Disney+ platform, in the United States.

As CBN News reported, the series follows an 18-year-old girl who becomes pregnant after a one-night stand with the devil.

Last year, Disney+ was given the green light to start production on the German original series.

According to Movieguide®, the series will be released in Germany in May. However, it does not have a confirmed release date in the U.S. yet.

“Horrifically, this series portrays Satan as a romantic partner. By normalizing and promoting such a relationship, ‘Pauline’ sends a dangerous message to young viewers that associating with demons, Satan, and evil is acceptable and even sexy or desirable,” explained Ted Baehr, chairman and founder of Movieguide®.

“If released, there will be millions of young viewers who may perceive this twisted and disturbing story as desirable and exciting. The show’s attempt to normalize and even promote demonic association is a blatant attempt to blur the lines of morality and make evil desirable,” he added.

Meanwhile, the Parents Television and Media Council is warning parents about a separate demonic-themed animated show on Amazon Prime Video.

According to Deadline, the adult animated musical comedy Hazbin Hotel, follows Charlie, the princess of Hell, as she pursues a goal of “rehabilitating demons to peacefully reduce overpopulation in hell. After yearly extermination imposed by angels, she opens a hotel in the hopes that patrons will be ‘checking out’ into Heaven.”{eoa}
