

This Is Precisely Why You Should Join the Drop Disney Campaign

Christopher Rufo, who founded the Drop Disney campaign, dug up the Disney+ “This Is Me: Pride Celebration Spectacular.” It aired last year on the official Disney+ YouTube and Facebook accounts and is still up for viewing.

The Disney+ special opens with Nina West, a man whose actual name is Andrew Levitt, dressed in a fairy godmother dress, a purple wig and makeup. He invites “Disney fans of all identities to know ... we see you, and you are worthy.” Then he sings the beloved Beauty and the Beast number “Be Our Guest.” The performance features rainbow eye shadow, rainbow hand fans, a rainbow umbrella, a rainbow dress, rainbow flags, rainbow confetti and rainbow backlighting.

After the number Levitt says, “And that, my friends, is what we like to call Disney magic.” The video features Kermit the Frog asking Nina for fashion advice. Then Nina introduces two gay men singing Aladdin’s “A Whole New World” to each other, including the “Tell me, princess” part.

Rufo tweeted, “SHOCK: Disney+ promoted a drag queen special for children, encouraging kids as young as kindergarten to join the gender identity and trans activist organization GLSEN.”

In the special, Disney partners with the Gay, Lesbian & Straight Education Network, whose mission West describes: “GLSEN’s mission is to create safe and inclusive schools for LGBTQ+ students in grades K-12, and Disney+ is so proud to support this wonderful organization.”

After footage of Disney’s “reimagine tomorrow” internal meetings was recently leaked to Rufo, parents all across America were appalled by executive producer Latoya Ravenau's "not-at-all-secret gay agenda." Ravenau even admits on screen, "I was just, wherever I could, just basically adding queerness."

The Disney+ "This Is Me: Pride Celebration Spectacular" premiered on YouTube June 27, 2021, long before the internal leaks occurred. "Out," an animated short film celebrating homosexuality, also premiered on Disney+ in June of 2021.

With new shows like The Proud Family and High School Musical: The Musical: The Series as well as the upcoming release of the movie Lightyear, Disney has ramped up its efforts to promote wokeness and homosexuality. But this is not new, according to Andrew Levitt, the man who goes by the drag name of Nina West.

To join the the Drop Disney Campaign, click here: {eoa}

Rob Vischer is a freelance writer for Charisma Media.

Read articles like this one and other Spirit-led content in our new platform, CHARISMA PLUS.