"Girls need women who embrace their God-given womanhood and empower them to love what makes them a godly girl," says Patti Garibay, founder and executive director.

"On Mother's Day, AHG recognizes and celebrates the power of a praying mom in raising godly daughters," she adds. "We're proud to foster meaningful relationships between mothers and daughters; mentors and mentees; and girls looking for examples of godly women of character, leadership, virtue and integrity."

"It's normal for your girl to come to you or her friends when she is going through a tough time," Garibay explains. "In fact, it's critical that she has family and friends she can run to when days are dark. As you guide her with your wisdom, remember to also teach your girl the power of prayer."
