

Time Magazine Compares Hillary to an Imperfect Prophet

Donald Trump may have landed on the cover of Time magazine as “Person of the Year,” but that didn’t stop the liberal media giant from taking a few stabs at the present-elect-or exalting Hillary Clinton.

Specifically, Time acknowledged Trump “did what no American politician had attempted in a generation,” but was also quick to say he “magnified the divisions of the present, inspiring new levels of anger.”

Time’s Michael Scherer wrote: “Now it’s difficult to count all the ways Trump remade the game: the huckster came off more real than the scripted political pros. The cable-news addict made pollsters look like chumps. The fabulist out-shouted journalists fighting to separate fact from falsehood. The demagogue won more Latino and black votes than the 2012 Republican nominee.”

That’s to be expected, I suppose. But what Time did next defies logic.

Time painted Hillary with the brush of a deliverer, claiming, “She became a symbol in a fight that was about much more than symbolism ...” and ““She’s the woman who was almost president; she is what might have been and what will yet be.”

Finally, Time managed to slime Moses and exalt Hillary in the same sentence:

“Like an American Moses, she was an imperfect prophet, leading women to the edge of the Promised Land. Now it’s up to another woman to enter it.”

Wow, really?

Franklin Graham also found it odd.

“Maybe Time should check their Bible,” he says. “I find that a very interesting parallel. Moses led the children of Israel to wander around in the wilderness for 40 years. I wonder if Time was saying that if Hillary Clinton were elected, she would have led us into the wilderness?” {eo}
