

Use These Powerful Tools to Access Your Place of Grace

Finding your place of grace is key to mastering your message. I've always said, if you are talking to everyone, you're talking to no one, which means no one is listening.

All too often when I ask my clients who they are called to—their predominant avatar, or target audience—the answer is normally “everyone.” This is just not true! Even Jesus was called to a certain group of people when it came to His ministry.

You are not called to everyone, and you are not graced to do everything. When you get this revelation and begin to hone in on your place of grace, your sweet spot, your voice will become more powerful and your messaging more strategic.

There is an oil that is especially for you, and it will not pour until you show up to the occasion. It does not matter if you don't look, smell or sound like your other brothers and sisters. You may even be fresh off the field tending sheep, but God is calling you to your place of grace so the oil can pour.

Too often, too many people are trying to use the armor of others, also known as “doing what others are doing,” and in the end they do not get the results they wanted. But when you can step into your place of grace in life, your giant-slaying days will begin to manifest.
