

WATCH: Franklin Graham Has an Important Message for Muslims

Radical Islamists are not surrendering after the Charlie Hebdo attacks, with members of the Islamic State leaving their caves and making plans for war.

On an episode of "Hannity," Franklin Graham took his place among social, political and religious commentators to discuss growing terrorism threats.

When Sean Hannity got to Graham, the host asked the evangelist about Egyptian President Abdel-Fattah el-Sissi recent comments against the extremists.

"We are in need of a religious revolution," Hannity quotes the president as saying. "You, imams, are responsible before Allah. The entire world ... is waiting for your next move ... because [the Islamic world] is being torn, it is being destroyed, it is being lost—and it is being lost by our own hands."
