

WATCH: Historical Scholar Explores Harvard's Gospel-Centered Roots

In this segment of "Lost Episodes in American History," Dr. Kenyn Cureton, now vice president of the Family Research Council, explores the lost Christian heritage of Harvard University.

Many of us think of the Ivy League school as America's first college but ignore its founding as a school to train ministers. Watch, and learn more about how God has used Harvard as an instrument of His grace.