

WATCH: This Muslim's Story of Converting from Jihad to Jesus Will Blow You Away

It's a conversion story that matches that of Saul of Tarsus.

Jerry Rassamni was caught in the middle of a religious war in Lebanon, one in which he was fighting against Christianity.

"People were slaughtered because of their religion," says Jerry Rassamni. "There was so much hatred."

It was that hatred that fueled him to fight the Jihad—or Muslim Holy War. He says he was addicted to gun powder, had to kill or be killed.

"Christians were abominous, hated, and I really thought they were the devil incarnate," Rassamni says.

But Muslim violence was not the answer, and Rassamni began seeking out other answers—Christian answers.

"When religion tells you man is basically good, it is a lie of colossal dimensions," he says.
