

What Did Kim Clement Actually Think of the Holy Spirit?

Kim Clement has long been known as a prophet for the ages who spoke very specifically over situations happening in nations around the world. Many of these prophecies have since come to pass, including ones about Donald Trump and his re-election. The question though, is what did Kim Clement truly believe about the Holy Spirit?

In a recent video shared on YouTube, one of Clement's messages from 1994 discusses the power of the Holy Spirit and details personal prophecies he gave to people in the crowd.

"Every person that is born-again has a prophetic anointing," Clement says. "Purpose cannot be tapped into unless it is revealed or unveiled by God."

Clement stressed how the only way for any of us to truly know our purpose is by hearing the voice of God, having this revelation given by the Holy Spirit.

"God has to speak it out for it to actually happen and for God to get the glory ultimately, for the thing that He wants to do in your life," Clement says.

Clement also points out that the "negative" does not exist in the mind of the Lord. Instead, God always speaks what He sees for the future, not the current circumstances that the world looks at. Clement shows that while many believe God stopped speaking long ago, he saw how the Lord has something to tell every single generation.

“God has something new for every decade,” he says. “God has something new for every year. There’s something new for every generation...[and] there’s always some old guy that’s saying, ‘this is not right.’”

Kim Clement did not limit the Holy Spirit; rather, he fully relied on Him to bring God’s glory to the world. His prophetic ministry was rooted in the belief that God continues to speak to every generation, revealing purpose and destiny through His Spirit. His legacy stands as a testament to a life led by revelation, faith and the pursuit of God’s unfolding vision.
