

What Jaw-Dropping Comment Did 'Ninja' Make to His 24 Million Fans?

Tyler Blevins is one of the most prolific video-game streamers on the internet, with a Twitch account boasting more than 19 million followers and a YouTube channel with nearly 24 million subscribers. So when he says something, it makes an impact.

During a recent stream, Blevins, who goes by "Ninja" online, said, "Yes, dude, Jesus is King. I mean, and if – even if you don't think He is – don't judge me for it, and I won't judge you for it, man. I do, I just feel it's so crazy, man."

This is not the first time Blevins has spoken candidly about his worldview.

In 2019, for example, the viral gamer revealed during a livestream doctors pressured his mother to abort him after prenatal tests suggested he could suffer from spina bifida or Down syndrome.

Thanking his mother for not pursuing an abortion for him or his two brothers, Blevins said, "My mom is a saint and an angel and I love her to death."

During his recent faith-related comments, “Ninja” offered his perspective on how to approach conversations about religion, encouraging listeners to engage to listen and learn rather than to force their own beliefs onto others.
