

What Strings Is George Soros Trying to Pull for the November Election?

In a Bloomberg News interview, brought to light by our friend John Binder of The American Mirror, Nazi Collaborator and convicted currency manipulator George Soros predicts a landslide popular vote win for Donald Trump, but says Hillary will win the electoral vote “because paid political announcements will have a big role.”

The video is only one minute, 24 seconds—here’s the link. Starting at the 30-second mark, Soros says the popular vote will lead to a landslide victory for Donald Trump, but “not in the electoral vote, because there, paid political announcements will have a big role, and so the electoral thing will be closer.”

Now here’s the important part of what Soros has to say about the election: “We are a small minority of extremists, and so we are all moving in that direction.”

He predicts Donald Trump will not be elected. When the interviewer says, “But you think Hillary Clinton is a done deal,” he replies, “Yeah.”

The conspiracy-minded among us might be inclined to then put the following dots together.

Conservatives have been concerned for quite some time that Democrats’ laxity or fraud in voter ID and ballot security compromised the integrity of elections, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation has purportedly found breaches in Illinois and Arizona’s voter registration databases.

After Yahoo News broke the data breach story on Monday an FBI official told Time that investigators were also seeking evidence of whether other states may have been targeted. The FBI is urging states to increase computer security ahead of the November presidential election, according to reports in Time and other outlets.

However, what Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson and Obama have in mind is not providing the local and state election officials who have the constitutional responsibility for conducting elections with improved technology or ballot security, it is federalizing the collecting, tallying and reporting of votes.

As Johnson put it, "There's no one federal election system. There are some 9,000 jurisdictions involved in the election process ... There's a national election for president, there are some 9,000 jurisdictions that participate, contribute to collecting votes, tallying votes and reporting votes."

What Johnson and Obama are proposing is not providing the states and localities with better software or cybersecurity; it is federalizing elections and making themselves responsible for collecting, tallying and reporting of votes.

Here's another dot, Smartmatic Group, is an electronic voting firm whose worldwide headquarters is located in the United Kingdom. Smartmatic ran the online balloting process in the Utah Republican Open Caucuses.

The chairman of Smartmatic's board, Lord Mark Malloch-Brown, currently serves on the board of George Soros's Open Society Foundation and has close ties to the billionaire. According to reporting by Breitbart, besides formerly serving as vice-chairman of Soros's Investment Funds and the billionaire's Open Society Institute, Malloch-Brown is currently a global board member of Soros's Open Society Foundation.

Here's another dot, in January 2014, Obama's 10-person Presidential Commission on Election Administration released its recommendations for reforming the U.S. election process, including transitioning to voting via tablet computers and other technologies, as Breitbart reported.

The commission highlighted new technologies in which the voter can “pre-fill” sample ballots at home to be scanned later at the polling place.

Now here’s another dot, the panel dismissed concerns about hacking. The commission stated: “The fact that a tablet or off-the-shelf computer can be hacked or can break down does not mean such technology is inherently less secure than existing ballot marking methods if proper precautions are taken.”

Now here’s a final dot, Soros has put at least $12,460,121 into the Black Lives Matter movement and the shadowy radical Leftist network that funds it for one purpose and one purpose only—to disrupt the 2016 presidential election and destroy the “white” American core of capitalism, free markets, limited government and American traditional culture and values.

So what does Nazi Collaborator and convicted currency manipulator George Soros know that the rest of us don’t know?

If you like a good conspiracy theory here’s one for you: The disruption of the 2016 election by hacking and rioting will, according to Obama and Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson, justify the federal takeover of collecting votes, tallying votes and reporting votes for the presidential election. The software and tools they choose will be supplied by Nazi Collaborator and convicted currency manipulator George Soros’ aligned Smartmatic and the Smartmatic technology for collecting, tallying and reporting of votes will report that Hillary Clinton has won the election per Soros’ prediction.

And it all works very nicely if you fund the creation of chaos and fund and control the apparent solution to the chaos as George Soros and his network so clearly do.
