

Why Chuck Pierce Prophesied in 2008 That Donald Trump Would Be President

In my new book, God and Donald Trump, I document the way four modern-day prophets prophesied ahead of the election that Donald Trump would win. Right up to Election Day, however, popular opinion had it that he would lose big to Hillary Clinton. Yet, he won! The prophets were right.

As I wrote the book, I interviewed numerous people and recorded six of these interviews so I could transcribe them. I also realized I could use them as podcasts to give behind-the-scenes information about how I put the book together.

My first interview was with Chuck Pierce, who prophesied in 2008 that God would play a “trump card,” and how he began to understand that God was referring to Donald Trump. The prophetic aspect in what God is doing is not usually part of our public discourse. I believe my book makes an appeal to the reader that God is involved in the affairs of man, including the election of our president.

Chuck Pierce is not active politically, but he is active in intercession. When people attacked him for prophesying that Trump would win, he said he was merely speaking as an oracle of the Lord—which is what a true prophet is supposed to do.

Please take time to listen to the podcast to get much more detail from Chuck Pierce himself. He emphasizes what God is doing, especially His covenant with Israel, which he believes is key for the future of American and for Trump’s presidency.

He also tells a story that may have never been reported: a “decree” made by Vice President Pence at the White House in May about a covenant between Israel and the United States.
