

Woman Wanted to Be Suicide Bomber: 'Now I Love Jesus'

Some little girls dream of growing up to be ballet dancers. Others imagine a life of successful singing or performing. Still others long to train animals, maybe dolphins or horses.

Not Isik Abia.

She wanted to be a suicide bomber.

Now a passionate Christian, she tells Sid Roth about the moment Christ radically changed her life and how she devoted every last breath to winning people to Him.

Watch the video to see.