

'World's Greatest Atheist' Has Near-Death Experience and Finds Jesus in Sean Hannity Film

Actors Kevin and Sam Sorbo have teamed up with conservative commentator Sean Hannity to bring "hope" at a time when they say the world desperately needs it.

Hannity joined the husband-and-wife duo in making the new feature film, Let There Be Light, a fictional movie about "the world's greatest atheist," who "has a near-death experience and comes back with a new view on life."

"We live in a very, very dark world; it's darker and darker all the time and the anger and frustration," Kevin Sorbo told "The Billy Hallowell Podcast" on Thursday, saying the current climate shows people are desperately "looking for something."

Click here to read the rest of this story from our content partners at Faithwire.