

Young Evangelist's Prayer With Satanist Goes Viral for All Right Reasons

A young Christian evangelist's conversation with a Satanist is getting some attention after the fascinating and powerful exchange was posted on social media.

Bryce Crawford's video of his chat with the purported Satanist named Chad has received hundreds of thousands of views since being posted earlier this summer, The Christian Post reported.

"I'm Satanic," Chad proclaimed at the start of the interaction, explaining it means he worships "one of the Satans." He said the hypocritical nature of Christians led him away from Jesus and toward Satanism.

At another point during the interaction, the Satanist proclaimed he would have burned Jesus rather than crucify him, explaining he believes Christ was a "witch."

For his part, Crawford kept his responses focused on bringing the conversation to a natural place where he could share the Gospel message.

"So, you said ever since you started worshiping Satan your life has been better?" Crawford asked Chad, who affirmed his relationship with the devil has "been better" for him.

Rather than deride or push back forcefully, Crawford responded by noting that he was not surprised by this claim.
