

Candace Cameron Bure Describes 'Dark and Demonic' Hollywood Sex Party Encounter

Actress Candace Cameron Bure is warning about the spiritual darkness that exists within parts of Hollywood after she and her husband accidentally walked into an underground sex party.

Bure described the disturbing incident during a recent episode of her podcast, as reported by Fox News, explaining that what they encountered forced them to immediately leave.

"I have some really weird embarrassing moments," Bure said. "Although I shouldn't say embarrassing for me, they were more shameful of going to places where I thought, like, 'Oh, this person's a friend, and I'm going to be cool and do this.'"

Bure said she and her husband Val Bure had no idea what kind of event they had been invited to until they stepped inside.

"We walked in, and my eyeballs were popping out of my head because I saw stuff I've never seen before in my life," she recalled. "I'm looking at Val, going like, 'How are we here? What is happening?'"

The couple quickly left.

"We made a hard U-turn and walked right out of there. It just was so slimy and weird," Bure said. "We just had no idea what we were walking into, and it was so disgusting and gross."

Order Jenny Weaver's Book, "The Wicked World of Witchcraft" on !

Hollywood's Dark Reality

The darker side of Hollywood has moved from rumor to documented reality. Investigations over the past several years exposed a pattern of exploitation and secretive party culture among powerful elites.

The criminal network surrounding Jeffrey Epstein revealed how wealthy and influential figures used private gatherings to conceal widespread abuse. Court records and investigative reporting exposed a system built on secrecy and power.

Federal investigations into music mogul Sean "Diddy" Combs have produced similar allegations involving coercion, exploitation and disturbing party environments. Testimony and legal filings describe a culture where influence shields immoral behavior from public scrutiny.

This pattern reflects a deeper spiritual reality. Scripture warns that corruption flourishes where darkness is hidden behind wealth and power. Bure's experience offers a rare glimpse into that world.

Standing Firm in Faith

Bure has long rejected Hollywood roles that conflict with her Christian convictions.

"I was just honestly never the kid that wanted to do the risky thing, that wanted to use my body or my sexuality to get ahead," she said on a previous episode of the Stay True podcast. "My morality meant more to me, and my character has always meant more to me than the success of things. That's a part of inherently me not because I'm trying to be the righteous person, but I just genuinely was not that kid that wanted to do that."

She repeatedly turned down scripts that crossed her moral boundaries.

“So, it made for some of those decisions when I would get presented a script that went against my own moral boundaries,” Bure said. “It was an easy decision to say, ‘No, I don’t want to do that,’ because I genuinely didn’t want to do those things.”

“There were definitely moments where I would get scripts, the sex part of it comes into it, and I was like, ‘I’m just not doing that.’ Maybe it was out of embarrassment, maybe whatever the reason, but I’m like, ‘Nope, not going on that.’ Easy to say no.”

Bure said many young actors face pressure to prove they are no longer children when they enter adulthood.

“I think that’s where we see a lot of younger stars, when they do transition into that, ‘Oh, I’m 18, I’m 21,’ and they want to prove they’re older now and not seen as a child,” she said. “That’s where those big, important decisions come in. What do you do with the opportunity?”

Her foundation remains rooted in faith and family.

“The world is always going to criticize, and you can’t please everyone. Sometimes you just let it roll off,” Bure said.

“And, so, I think you just have to take it with a grain of salt. I know who I am because I know who God tells me that I am, and I have such a loving and wonderful family at home.”

“It’s very easy to stay rooted and planted around the people that I love,” she added. “When there are unwanted opinions, you just go, ‘OK, you can have them, you’re welcome to them. I don’t need to look at them or think about them.’”

Bure’s account exposes a truth many already recognize. Behind Hollywood’s glamour lies a culture that worships darkness and pledges allegiance to Satan and his forces. Her response offers a different path, grounded in faith in Jesus Christ, the conviction of the Holy Spirit and the courage to walk away.

James Lasher, a seasoned writer and editor at Charisma Media, combines faith and storytelling with a background in journalism from Otterbein University and ministry experience in Guatemala and the LA Dream Center. A Marine Corps and Air Force veteran, he is the author of The Revelation of Jesus: A Common Man's Commentary and a contributor to Charisma magazine. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.