

Michael Todd: Why Some Churches' Plans to Reach the Next Generation Are 'Trash'

Michael Todd says the church needs to raise its game when it comes to reaching the next generation for Jesus. The Spirit-filled Tulsa pastor believes a lot of churches try to throw token appreciation or minimal effort at young people with events like "Youth Sunday," and he has strong words for that approach: "It's trash." In this video, Todd shares his heart and why he believes the next generation deserves so much more effort.