

10 Most Powerful Moves of God During Trump's First 100 Days

The first 100 days of Donald Trump's administration have been nothing short of a whirlwind as he and his team attempt to usher in the "golden age" of America. Perhaps one of the greatest shifts we've seen over this time span is the recognition of the Christian faith when compared to the previous presidential administration.

On X, White House Faith Director Jenny Korn shared some of these powerful moments when Trump has already made strides to re-implement Judeo-Christian faith back into our society. Below are the top 10 moments Korn believes are changing America for the better.

In just the first 100 days, we've witnessed a powerful wave of restoration and righteousness sweeping through the highest levels of government. These historic moves are not only policy wins—they're prophetic markers of a nation realigning with its spiritual foundation. These acts are indeed the answers to prayers of God's righteous people who cried out for our nation.

If this is what God can do in 100 days, imagine what we might see in the next 100. Could revival sweep through our schools, campuses and communities as courage replaces compromise? One thing is certain: the momentum is building, and the seeds of faith sown in these first days are destined to bear fruit in ways we've only begun to imagine.
